

National Leadership Development Day

— July 28 3PM —

Todd Cherches How Leaders Can Leverage the Power of Visual Leadership

One of the biggest challenges every business professional faces is getting others to "see" what you are saying. In this fun and fast-paced session, we will explore 'The Four Ways to Think and Communicate More Visually' so as to be a more effective thinker, communicator, and leader.

Rebecca P. Murray Mary Poppins Leadership

Through its compelling backstory, the making of Walt Disney's blockbuster film, and the groundbreaking 1964 movie itself, you'll discover why Mary Poppins IS the practically perfect leadership metaphor. Participants delight in this highly-interactive, gamified session.

Yoram Solomon How Leaders Unintentionally Kill Employee Trustworthiness

Trust is reciprocal. Not that when I trust you, you will trust me. That actually doesn't work. Actually, if I trust you, and I show you that I trust you, you will behave in a trustworthy way. Unfortunately, leaders don't do that. They wait for their employees to earn their trust, and as a result, hurt their employees' trustworthiness.

Kiki Wilkinson Coaching: An Essential Leadership Skill

Explore the meaning and importance of coaching as an essential leadership skill. We will discuss how coaching can benefit both leaders and their teams, and offer practical tips for incorporating coaching into your leadership style.

Randy Pennington Dimensional Leadership in a New Next World

If you sense that the tried-and-true ways of influencing others are no longer adequate, you are not alone. We are experiencing an inflection point created by changes in demographics, values, technology, politics, economics, globalization, and fear about the future. The result is a level of uncertainty and upheaval to which we are unaccustomed and potentially ill-equipped to address. In this world, there is no more new normal. There is only a perpetual New Next.